Printmaking Techniques in Painting

Janet Trierweiler

Printing Plate Gelli Plate <https://www.gelliarts.com>. There are many companies that make Gelli plates. Make sure you read reviews. Gelliart's plate is good. Glass can also be used in place of the Gelli plate.

Brayer - 4" brayer

Baren Flat bottom jar or wooden spoon

Paints If you use Acrylic paint you will need Golden Open Medium or Glazing Medium to add to your paint or if you use Open Acrylic paints, there is no need for the medium Inks If you prefer to use water based block printing ink. These are made specifically for block printing but acrylics and water based oils work fine. Water-based printmaking inks are the other option.

Paint Brushes

Stencils If you have stencils or want to purchase one or more stencils you can use these and we will be making our own stencils.

Chip board, thin plastic, transparency paper or acetate for making stencils Relief Printing Block Soft-cut or Speedball Speedy Carve Block

3x4 or 4x6 Ball point pen

Soft Graphite Pencils 6B, 7B, 8B or 9B

Linoleum Cutters <https://www.dickblick.com/products/blick-lino-cutter-set/>

$8.99 Exacto knife

Palette paper or Reynolds freezer paper bigger than your Gelli Plate

Paper Lots of paper for experimentation. The smoother the paper, the more detailed the print. The more absorbent the paper, the easier to print. Japanese rice paper is good. No Glossy Paper for use with the Gelli plates. It does something to break down the mineral oil in the plate and sticks to the plate.
